Message from the President:

I think the panel discussion went well, but perhaps as a participant I am not the best judge. What did you think?

This month we will have a treat. John K Jordan (not to be confused with John B Jordan) will be here demonstrating Platters. John is one of the most prolific turners working these days and his work is universally exceptional. He is also an outstanding demonstrator and nice guy. Come with your attention meter set to High, and your questions ready to ask. To get a sense of what you are in for visit this collection of his work on the Sawmill Creek discussion board.

ON-GOING PROJECTS

Beads of Courage boxes

Repeating the call for Beads of Courage Boxes. Remember, the limits on these boxes are really pretty open in terms of style so feel free to let your creative juices flow. Just remember that these are for some very ill children so do keep within the guidelines. As you plan out your boxes please take the time to read this:

PRESIDENT'S CHALLENGE

May: Turn a Marble. A small pee-wee, a shooter, a cat's eye, an aggie, or an elgin will work. Actually any sphere will be fine. If we have enough of them we may get a game going after the meeting. (I know, the Elgin Marbles are not marbles in this sense, but I was in the British Museum Friday and couldn't resist the pun.) see <https://www.imarbles.com/kindsofmarbles.php> for inspiration.

June: This month is not a turning specifically. Bring in a Jig, ideally a turning jig, but any jig you are willing to share will suffice.

Minutes of March Meeting:

Jim Barbour began the meeting at 6:37 by recognizing visitors and new members. He took a count of those with Guilford County addresses. He announced that John K. Jordan would be our presenter in May. He mentioned that the date for Jim Duxbury's workshop was incorrect in the newsletter—it should have been 5/5/18. It was mentioned that information on a dust collection system for sale was contained in a flyer on the gallery table.

The president's challenge this month (April) was to turn an acorn. May's challenge is to do something with marble. Earl Martin is this month's turner of the month. In May, the turner of the month will be Crystal Early. Rita Duxbury has organized our July picnic for many years. This year the picnic is on Saturday July 14th and Bonnie Jones will be taking the lead on the organization of that event.

The treasurer reported that we have 2 new members this month and that we have a total of $6,600 in the bank. Jim Yarbrough pointed out that years of Woodworker Journal DVD's had been donated to the library. George Sudermann pointed out that 26 members of the club had produced 175 Purple Heart pens. Bob Muir is heading up the summer camp turning program. Volunteers are encouraged to e-mail him to get involved.

The instant gallery was (again) quite inspiring and the raffle was graceful.

This month's "demo" involved Jim Barbour, Jim Duxbury and Dave MacInnes discussing what they had learned over the years pertaining to the various ways that they have approached the selling of the items that they have turned. Each of these people have had very different experiences and thus had very different insights to share. I will not try to summarize everything they said. Rather I will only try to list what stood out to me in their comments.

Dave MacInnes—

- When you seek to get a gallery to carry your work—visit the gallery and take samples of your work that they could show. Be persistent.
- They might take 40% to 60% of the sale price for themselves.
- You want to pick a "high-end" gallery
- The up-side is that it is time efficient—the down-side is that you don't have any customer interaction
- There is a difference between a customer (one-time purchase) and a patron (repeat customer)
- Pricing is the difficult part. What is your time worth? You should set the price to fit the pace at which you wish to produce—lower prices/higher volume.
- You need to keep good records and worry about the tax implications of your activities. Sales taxes and tax write offs.
- You can sell the same thing for more in the mountains or at the coast; and more for tourists than for locals.
- Selling at a "craft show" requires a large inventory and a solid variety of items on offer.
- You need to be mindful of who is attending the festival and what other vendors there are and what they have on offer. Too many vendors drive down business.
- Square is good and you need business cards.

Jim Duxbury—

- Don't quit your day job.
- There is no such thing as being a "little bit" in business. You are in it or you aren't. Taxes are no longer "EZ".
- You can get paid to do Demos. You get better at it over time, especially if you have a caring and loving companion who does not hesitate to offer (constructive) criticism.

- You need to be organized. Don't trust the hosts when they tell you that they have what you will need. Bring your own of anything you might possibly need.
- Produce high quality handouts for each demo.
- Pitch your presentation to your audience's level of interests and their background knowledge.
- Make a demo checklist.
- Insist on a clear and detailed contract.
- By the way, the "club map" on the AAW website is excellent. You can always drop in on a meeting somewhere and meet new friends.

Jim Barbour—

- You need a good website to let others know what you are doing and what you have on offer.
- Your home splash page can flick between photos of your work. Gallery tabs are good too.
- Jim tries to run his shop as a "pays for itself" endeavor. If you need a laser cutter for a job, try to make it so that you profit from those type jobs quickly pays for the tool.
- Some sites can be set up so that the customer can purchase an item directly through the web site.
- You need a strategy for how you intend to "drive people to your site."
- Find your niche. Promote yourself.
- Get business cards and distribute them widely.
- Work on your web site—work on search engine efficiency.
- Look into "Google analytics". What are the keywords that people will use when they are looking for the sort of thing that you have for sale?
- Square space is good
- You can get a domain name and you can own a URL.
- Pay Pal Business account and card reader is good
- Venmo and We Pay are possible alternatives.
- Etsy is an option for some. Square and Zillo too.
- Find something that you enjoy doing. Get good at it. Promote yourself.

- Pricing—Jim seeks $35/hour (of the time actually spent working on the project)
- IRS forms.
- Choice between LLC and DBA "Doing business as"
- You can write off losses
- Keep sharp tools and trust your hands.

Jim concluded the evening by showing us how he turns acorns (a product that he sells). The high points included the way that he utilizes a "story stick" for some projects and that he will have a large number of pre-set calipers just to increase efficiency.
